

See Women of 1915 at the Armenian Church of the Holy Translators, Framingham, MA

All are invited to a screening of Women of 1915 at the Armenian Church of the Holy Translators on Saturday, October 14. Brunch will be served at 10:30 am and the movie begins at 11:30 am.

Don't miss this outstanding film that portrays not only the pain and struggles of our mothers, grandmothers and great grandmothers but their inspiring strength and resilience to survive and create their legacies.

This is an important film for Armenians to truly see what women endured and how they thrived despite the odds against them. There is actual footage of survivors and their families telling their stories. It's a story of hope, faith, determination and inspiration passed down to generations. It will make you feel proud, grateful and emotional. If not for their resilience and determination, we would not be thriving and enjoying this life today.

This high quality film will make you laugh and cry. A Q&A will follow with the brilliant filmmaker, Bared Maronian.

The cost to attend is $25 for adults and $20 dollars for students. Seating capacity is limited, so advance reservations and payment is required. No tickets will be sold at the door.
