When Armenia became Christian, its leaders—and later its writers—had to rethink their country's politics.

Professor Darling Young will explore how the earliest Armenian historians adapted biblical interpretation and political ideas to describe and measure their own rulers and imagine a Christian Armenian nation

Robin Darling Young is Associate Professor of Theology at the Catholic University of America (Washington DC). Professor Darling Young has published and lectured widely on topics in the history of early Christianity and its thought, including scriptural interpretation, the history of asceticism and monastic thought, and the Christian cultures of ancient Syria and Armenia.
